Poetry.

Song.
BY SIR ROBERT AYTON, 1650.

do confess thou'rt smooth and fair—
And I might have gone near to love thee, Ad I not found the slightest prayer That lips could speak, had power to move thee;
At I can let thee now alone, Worthily to be loved by none.

do confess thou'rt sweet, yet find
The such an unthrift of thy sweets,
My favors are but like the wind
That kisseth everything it meets;
Ad since thou canst with more than one, Thou'rt worthy to be kissed by none.

do morning rose that untouched stands—Arm'd with her briars, how sweetly she lies,
At pluck'd and stain'd through ruler hands,
Her sweet no longer with her dwells;
Ad scent and beauty both are gone,
Ad leaves fall from her, one by one.

Varieties.
The knowledge of evil may help to good, and assist us to measure its value; very new idea should be to us a new rather in wings that bear us upward.

Reason is not a piece of furniture that can be put aside and used again. The man who should live ten years without reflection would never be capable of it again.

All the cares of the day ought to be laid aside with our clothes. None of them must be carried to bed with us; and in his respect, custom may obtain very rest power over the thoughts. It is a destructive practice to study in bed, and read till one falls asleep.

Remember for what purpose you were born, and through the whole of life, look it its end. Consider, when that comes, what will you put your trust in. Not in the bubble of worldly vanity—it will be broken; not in worldly pleasures—they will be gone; not in great connections they cannot serve you; not in wealth you cannot carry it with you; not in rank—in the grave there is no distinction; not in the recollection of a life spent in a giddy conformity to the silly fashions of a thoughtless and wicked world; but in that of a life spent soberly, righteously and godly, in this present world.

Do not be discouraged if occasionally you slip down by the way, and others read over you a little. In other words, do not let a failure or two dishearten you; accidents will happen, misadventures will sometimes be made, things will turn out differently from our expectations, and we may be sufferers. It is worth while to remember that fortune is like the skies in the month of April, sometimes cloudy, and sometimes clear and favorable; and as it would be folly to despair again in seeing the sun, because to-day is stormy, so it is unwise to sink into despondency when fortune frowns, since, in the common course of things, she may be expected to smile again.

Vice repeated is like the wandering wind,
Blows dust in others' eyes.
—Shakespeare.

Vice stings us, even in the pleasure, out virtue consoles us, even in our pains.
—Clinton.

In actions of life, who seeth not the althiness of evil, wanteth a great foil to perceive the beauty of virtue.—Sir P.
Sydney.

Vice is a monster of so faithful mien,
As to be hated needs but to be seen;
Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.
—Pope.

We do not despise all those who have vices, but we despise all those who have not a single virtue.—La Rochefoucauld.

Think't thou there is no tyranny but that Of blood and chains? The despotism of vice—
The weakness and the wickedness of luxury—
The negligence—the apathy—the evils
Of sensual sloth—produce ten thousand tyrants, Whose delegated cruelty surpasses
The worst acts of one energetic master.
However harsh and hard in his own bearing.
—Byron.

PROGRESS IN ARKANSAS.—A handbill recently displayed in Helena, Arkansas, must certainly be counted amongst the humors of American politics. Here it is:

BARBECUE AT LAGRANGE.
Thursday, Aug. 13, 1868.

COME ONE! COME ALL!! BOTH WHITE AND BLACK!!
As the infamous lie is in circulation that the meats for colored persons will be poisoned, we nail that Radical trick to the counter by offering choice of tables to our colored friends, or we will divide places with them.

H. N. HUTTON,
P. E. ANDERSON,
J. B. BRANDON,
Helena, Aug. 10, 1868.

Surely the "colored friends" could not refuse so generous an invitation.
Probably they came; most likely they listened; without doubt they ate. But they have yet to vote.—New York Evening Post.
